*Hayley Mills makes her American film debut
as Pollyanna, the Glad Girl of Eleanor H. Porter's perennially popular novel*

Hayley Mills shines as brightly as ever in

"Pollyanna"

Although it's been 25 years since her Disney debut, Hayley Mills continues to shine among the brightest stars on The Disney Channel. She made only six pictures for the studio, but every one was a winner. Those that we've shown on the Channel have brought countless requests for an encore, so this month we're pleased to reintroduce Hayley in her first Disney movie, "Pollyanna."

As it often does, luck played a large part in placing the right actress in the right film. Walt Disney had seen a striking performance by a 13-year-old girl in "Tiger Bay," an English movie starring John Mills. When writer/director David Swift began casting his screenplay of "Pollyanna," Walt had a suggestion for the title role. She turned out to be John Mills' daughter Hayley, whom he remembered from "Tiger Bay."

"Once they saw her, everybody agreed that Hayley was perfect for the part," David Swift recalls. "However, she did have a British accent, and Pollyanna—according to the well known, perennially popular book by Eleanor H. Porter—was cheerful, matter-of-fact, and all-American. 'What are we going to do about the accent?' Walt asked. 'I'll have her born in the West Indies,' I said."

Pollyanna Whittier, so the novel reads, was an orphan who came to a small Eastern town to live with her wealthy, strict, unloved and seemingly unloving spinster aunt, Polly Harrington. Walt assembled an impressive adult cast headed by Jane Wyman, Richard Egan, Karl Malden, Nancy Olson, Adolphe Menjou, Donald Crisp and Agnes Moorehead, but it was Hayley Mills who stole the show.

"Richard Egan summed it up," Swift says. "After doing a scene with Hayley, he walked over to me and said, 'David, I've got two chances in that scene—little, and none at all.'"

The phenomenon who became Walt Disney's most popular juvenile screen star was born April 18, 1946, in London. Neither her actor father nor playwright mother encouraged her to become an actress. However, when the opportunity to appear in "Tiger Bay" arose, she accepted it with the blessing of her parents.

Hayley's second picture for Walt Disney Productions was "The Parent Trap," also written and directed by David Swift.

"Her father used to visit the set," Swift says. "One day we were shooting a golf scene and found ourselves short one bit player. Without any hesitation John Mills, one of the most eminent actors in the world, stepped right in and played a caddy."

Hayley was 19 when she made her final film for Disney. She returned to England, made four or five pictures there, then went into acting in British television and stage productions. Meanwhile she interrupted her career to marry, divorce, and raise two sons. A generation passed before she was seen by American audiences again.

"Disney Animation: The Illusion of Life" on television in 1981 and "The Flame Trees of Thika," a seven-part series on PBS' "Masterpiece Theatre" the following year reacquainted American viewers with Hayley Mills. The first of her Disney films premiered on The Disney Channel in 1983. ♡

Tips for STRANGER-PROOFING your child

Our concern for the safety of children has prompted us to air "Too Smart for Strangers," a special program to help you deal with the difficult topic of child abduction and abuse. We hope you'll watch and discuss it with your youngsters.

Because you can't be with your children all the time, teaching them how to recognize a potentially dangerous situation and what to do if confronted with one may be the best protection you can give them.

Many experts recommend that instead of merely giving vague warnings, parents should inform children about safety rules, then play a "what if" game to give kids practice at making correct judgments in sticky situations. Discussing how to act in a variety of circumstances will help your youngster react calmly—and correctly—if the real need arises.

Be Sure Your Children Understand These Vital Rules

Since it's not possible to tell good and bad strangers apart, tell your children that caution ALWAYS takes precedence over courtesy. Repeat each of these rules—with "what if" examples—until you're sure your children understand them so clearly that they've become second nature.

It's wise to be wary

- Never go anywhere or accept anything from anyone without your permission.
- Stay a healthy distance from any stranger.

- Never approach the car window or door of someone unknown to avoid being grabbed.
- Never tell their names, phone number or address, let a stranger take their picture, or reveal any personal information which might help a potential kidnapper track them.
- Be aware of possible "tricks" an unintentioned person might try, such as asking for help finding a lost object or saying you sent them.
- Kick, bite and yell "NO" if they are grabbed. Run away FAST. Tell an adult they trust.
- Never reveal that they're at home alone, but say "my Mom/Dad can't come to the phone now. May I take a message?"
- Lock the doors when alone, and never open them to a stranger for ANY reason.
- Call a trusted neighbor if they need help.
- Avoid unsafe places such as empty houses, vacant lots, back streets and alleys.
- Travel in pairs, especially to public restrooms or parks.
- Keep you informed at all times about where they're going, with whom and when they plan to return. (Make sure they have the same information about you.)
- Introduce you to their friends and friends' families.
- Know who's picking them up from school or other places.
- Remain with the entire family when on outings together.
- Never keep a "bad" secret from you.

Parents, Take These Preventive Measures To Increase Your Child's Protection

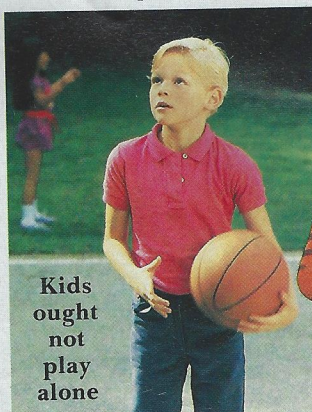

Besides drilling your children on the safety rules they must know, experts recommend that parents:

- Never leave children unattended.
- Drill children on their complete name, address and phone number (including city, state and area code).
- Teach kids how to call home from ANYWHERE using both direct dialing and operator assistance.
- Mark personal items with a colored dot, thread or number INSTEAD of the child's name.

- Select a password to use in case a stranger claims to be sent by you. Keep it secret and change it regularly.
- Arrange a safety hotline with neighbors. Post their phone numbers and all emergency numbers next to the telephone.

- Discuss a plan for reuniting if family

Kids ought not play alone

members are separated while away from home. (Emphasize that children should NEVER enter a parking lot or garage alone to search for you.)

- Always request—and check—babysitter references. Inform sitters of your plans.
 - Fingerprint your children. (Check with local schools or law enforcement officials about how to do this.)
 - Take a yearly photo (every two months if the child is under two). Keep an accurate record of physical characteristics such as height, weight, hair and eye color, scars, birthmarks, etc. and know how to quickly locate dental and medical records.
 - Ask your physician how to recognize the signs of physical abuse and be alert to sudden inexplicable behavioral changes that might signal a problem.
- An essential part of protecting your children is good communication with them, so along with the rules, let them know that NO ONE has the right to touch them in a way that seems wrong. Emphasize that it's NEVER their fault, if it happens—and reassure them with the knowledge that you love them and will always listen with understanding to ANYTHING they need to tell you. 🐻

GUY WILLIAMS, A FAR AWAY ZORRO

"Out of the night, when the full moon is bright, comes the horseman known as Zorro..."

On any given morning, a tall, distinguished-looking American in his late fifties leaves his apartment in Buenos Aires, walks to a nearby restaurant, orders a light breakfast, and reads the daily paper. He enjoys walking, so after a leisurely breakfast he sets out on a stroll. There are beautiful parks and pleasant places to walk in Buenos Aires, and as he makes his way about the city passersby occasionally nod and smile at him. They have recognized Guy Williams, who has become almost a folk hero in South America for his portrayal of Walt Disney's durable TV hero, "Zorro."

Williams played Zorro, the masked swordsman of Spanish California, from 1957 to 1961. He appeared in 78 episodes of the half hour series, and four hour-long shows on "Walt Disney Presents." Some of the programs were recut into two theatrical features, "The Sign of Zorro" and "Zorro the Avenger." In the swashbuckling role of a fearless night rider

Guy Williams
as Don Diego,
A. K. A. Zorro

who champions the poor, Williams rocketed to stardom alongside Disney's other TV sensation, Fess ("Davy Crockett") Parker.

Like Parker, Williams was a modestly successful actor when Disney chose him for a teleseries. He was born Armando Catalano, of Italian parents who had immigrated to New York. He turned to acting after attending Peekskill Military Academy, and in 1952 was signed to a one-year contract by Universal-International Studios. Nothing came of it, so he returned to New York and continued acting there until he decided to tackle Hollywood again in 1957. This time he landed a screen test at Disney which brought him the coveted role of Zorro, one of the most popular characters of film and fiction.

Zorro, known the world over as the Robin Hood of Old California, was created by novelist Johnston McCulley in 1919. The following year Douglas Fairbanks played the masked caballero in a silent movie, "The Mark of Zorro," which opened the gates to a flood of successors. At least 20 versions reached the screen, starring such disparate actors as Tyrone Power, Guy Stockwell, George Hamilton, Alain Delon and Errol Flynn's son Sean in the role of "the bold renegade who carves a 'Z' with his blade—a 'Z' that stands for Zorro."

These films were released worldwide, and found a particularly enthusiastic audience in South America. The Disney programs were dubbed in Spanish for television there; they swept the continent and continued to run year after year. By the time Guy Williams paid his first visit to Argentina in 1978 at the invitation of Channel 13, which was carrying the "Zorro" series nationally, he was an eagerly-awaited celebrity.

"We were driven in separate cars from the airport into Buenos Aires," says a friend who accompanied him. "It's a long way, about 30 miles, and people lined the entire length of the road. I asked the driver what all those people were there for and he said, 'Why, they are there to see Zorro.' Amazing."

invincible
romantic hero

Williams, an expert fencer, took the city by storm when he staged a public exhibition with Argentina's fencing champion. He attracted crowds and applause wherever he went; there was even a half-serious "Zorro for President" rally. He traveled on to charm the populace throughout South America, speaking English, Spanish, and Italian—the continent's second language—and when the tour ended Williams was an idol. He had shown his public that an actor can be as dashing off screen as on.

"He liked the acclaim and the life style," his friend says. "He went back to Buenos Aires a year later and took a furnished apartment there. He now has business investments and has established residence in Argentina. He returns to Los Angeles on alternate years. He is still a celebrity in South America, and living exactly as he wishes." 🐾

Share The Channel's Fun-Filled Preview Weekend—Tell A Friend!

For four days, starting September 5th, you can share a fun-filled weekend on The Disney Channel. It's our second annual preview celebration, and during this truly spectacular event we will show prospective subscribers an outstanding lineup of Channel entertainment—past, present and future. At the same time, it's your chance to catch up on some programs you may have missed, and enjoy a peek at some new programs coming your way.

Get ready for new faces and new adventures when we present scenes from forthcoming programs. "Return to Treasure Island," a 10-hour mini-series inspired by Walt Disney Productions' theatrical feature, stars Brian Blessed as Long John Silver and Christopher Guard as Jim Hawkins. It's being filmed abroad, from the windswept coast of Wales and England to the sunny shores of Jamaica. "Danger Bay" is a family-oriented half-hour series featuring two teenagers and their father, a curator-veterinarian at the Vancouver Aquarium. "The Blue Yonder" is a feature-length, made-for-The Disney Channel fantasy adventure film starring Art Carney, Peter Coyote and Huckleberry Fox. "The Dr. Joyce Brothers Program" presents the acclaimed psychologist in upbeat discussions on family life and communication.

Along with current hits, we're airing seven recent films during our weekend gala. They are "Pollyanna," "Pete's Dragon," "Swiss Family Robinson," "Robin Hood," "Never Cry Wolf," "The Undergrads" and "Lots of Luck." Interspersed with those favorites will be episodes from such popular series as "Still the Beaver," "New! Animal World," "Mouseterpiece Theater" and "The Wonderful World of Disney."

Plan ahead...gather your family and friends this weekend and watch The Disney Channel—the happiest place on cable! 🐭

Pollyanna shares a secret...

Pollyanna

Movie starring Hayley Mills, Jane Wyman, Richard Egan, Karl Malden, Nancy Olson

The glad girl's in town! She's bound to win your heart in this charming film which has set a Channel record as the most requested live-action motion picture in our library.

Who could resist the optimistic orphan, Pollyanna (played by Hayley Mills in her American film debut)? Apparently only her stiff-necked, wealthy Aunt Polly (Jane Wyman). Aunt Polly rules the town of Harrington with a frown — until Pollyanna arrives and begins showing everyone from the minister to the mayor how to find silver linings in their cloudy outlooks. But it's going to take a miracle to change her aunt, and even Pollyanna's cheerfulness may not be enough. (129 min.)

THE CHANNEL'S CHOICE

Your family will find an enticing blend of fact and fantasy in the programs we recommend this month.

PRIME TIME PROGRAMS WITH ADULT APPEAL

"Angel on My Shoulder"

Strong performances by Peter Strauss, Richard Kiley and Barbara Hershey—plus a fast-paced, witty script—make this humorous fantasy almost believable—and totally entertaining!

"Cycling Through China"

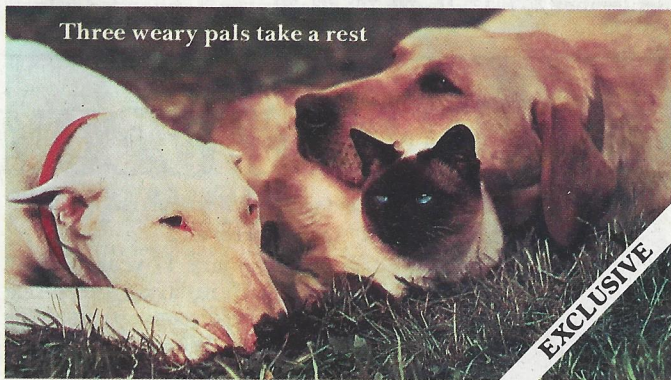

Expect the unexpected—such as a Harlem Globetrotter playing Chinese basketball or a star of "Dallas" performing Chinese opera—when you watch this unique special. It's packed with rare glimpses of Chinese people and places—plus superb performances by American entertainers!

PROGRAMS FOR CHILDREN

"Gulliver's Travels"

Perfectly cast as Gulliver, Richard Harris responds with gentle humor to his engaging animated co-stars. Songs by composer Michel LeGrand, whose credits include "The Umbrellas of Cherbourg" and "Ode to Billy Joe," are the frosting on this comic confection.

Three weary pals take a rest

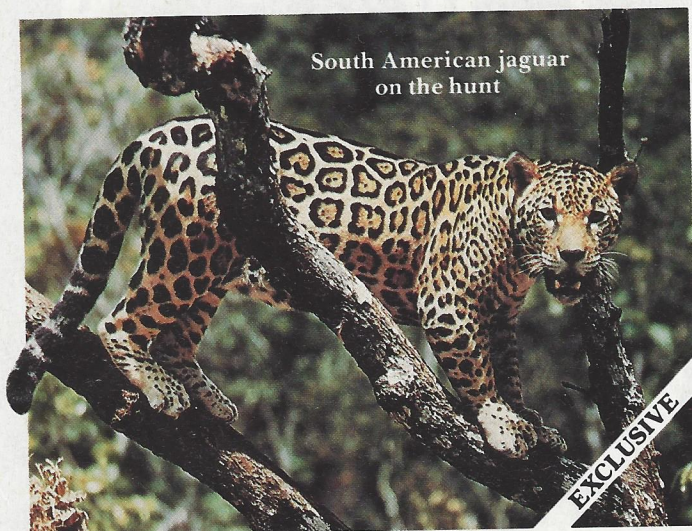

The Incredible Journey

Movie starring Emile Genest, Sandra Scott

Take an incredible — and touching — journey of love with Bodger, a bull terrier; Luath, a Labrador retriever; and Tao, a Siamese cat. The three face bear and lynx attacks, poisonous porcupine quills, unfordable rivers, hunger, cold and exhaustion on their 200-mile cross-country trek to find their home. Based on a true story, the film blends warmth, humor, drama, suspense, and the rugged beauty of northeast Canada. (80 min.)

We're All Ears

Linda Palmer
Subscriber Services Director

Dear Friends,

September is a special month for us. We've set aside September 5, 6, 7, and 8 for our national preview, when we invite potential subscribers all over the country to sample our services. During those days, we'll be offering extra-special programs—which I know you'll enjoy!—and telling new viewers how they can join The Disney Channel family. We ask your indulgence for rearranging the regular schedule during this brief period. I know how much our family enjoys The Disney Channel—and we want to let others know about it too!

This month is special for another reason, as well: we are premiering "Too Smart for Strangers," a highly valuable program designed to help children protect themselves from possibly dangerous strangers. I encourage you to watch this excellent production with your youngsters, and spend some time discussing the points it raises. If you have the chance, please drop me a brief note about your reactions to the program—I'd be very interested.

Sincerely,

Linda

CHEERS FOR CLOSED CAPTIONED FILMS

I must say I was very pleased to see closed captioning coming to The Disney Channel. I've become a deaf interpreter and am very aware of the lack of wholesome programs for deaf children.

Christine Belford
Glendale, AZ

We're glad to be able to provide our hearing-impaired viewers with a closed captioned Disney film each month. This month's selection is "Pollyanna."

WATCHING WHILE THEY WORK!

As the office manager at a cable station, I am very glad that our main office decided to offer The Disney Channel. My immediate supervisor has me leave it on our office TV so customers who come in can get a good look at it—but I can't get my work done for watching it myself!

SCHEDULE CHANGES— PRO OR CON?

I was so excited when I started looking through The Disney Channel Magazine and realized you'd changed the complete schedule. I am delighted. I'm quite interested to see how it will affect me and my household. I believe it'll be a big improvement.

Cynthia D. Brown
Westminster, CA

We were very upset to find that you'd changed "Mousercise" to 6:30 a.m. My kids are still asking why they can't watch it anymore. Please consider returning it to the original time.

Jamie Breckel
Bremerton, WA

Since we're always refining our scheduling to meet the needs of many age groups and interests, subscribers' opinions are very important to us. We must try to please a majority of our viewers, so as we hear from you about what does or doesn't work in the schedule, we'll continue to respond.

VIEWERS REACT TO "RUNNING BRAVE"

I really enjoyed "Running Brave." It was so inspirational. I was on the edge of my seat all through the race, even though I knew how it ended. Thanks for making such excellent films available.

Jan Ward
Broken Arrow, OK

In regards to your "Running Brave" and "Never Cry Wolf," we were disappointed to see nudity in both. We enjoy The Disney Channel as a good source of family entertainment. Please keep it that way.

Mr. and Mrs. Larry Crum
Tigard, OR

The Disney Channel welcomes letters and pictures from viewers. Send materials for publication to The Disney Channel Subscriber Services, 4111 W. Alameda, Burbank, CA 91505. All submissions must include name and address of sender. Please include the name of your local cable operator on all correspondence. Letters may be edited for reasons of space and clarity. All materials become property of The Disney Channel and cannot be individually acknowledged or returned.

INFANT WORKOUT

It's child's play with a purpose!

Babies with barbells? If that's what you think of when you hear the words "infant workout," relax. This funny term is really just a new way of describing hugging, stretching, and cuddling games—like those you see every morning on "You and Me, Kid." Now your 4- to 18-month-old infant can join in the fun with simple, playful exercises that not only help develop tiny bodies, but also let you and your little one share some tender growing-closer time!

One of the leaders in developing infant exercise programs is David Rabb, who runs four gyms for children in Southern California. According to Rabb, babies benefit most from stretching exercises that reinforce their natural movements. "Actually, these exercises are as much for parents as for the children," says Rabb. "The parents get to enjoy their babies, and learn that they really aren't that fragile."

"The kids benefit from stretching out their muscles and ligaments. But more important, they get a lot of hands-on experience with their parents, and actually feel their parents' confidence flow into their bodies."

It's easy to enjoy your own exercise-and-play program at home. Before you begin, be sure to get your pediatrician's OK. Then start by putting your baby, wearing only a diaper, on a clean, soft, firm surface. Rabb uses padded rugs in his gym, but you can put a blanket on your carpeted floor. Put on some pleasant background music. If your little one is in the mood—don't begin if baby is tired or hungry—try one of the exercises described below. (Baby should be lying on his back for all these exercises.)

Start with only a few repetitions of each exercise, and stop at once if baby gets distracted or bored. At first, the entire session should last just a few minutes. If both of you have fun, work up to 10- to 15-minute workouts.

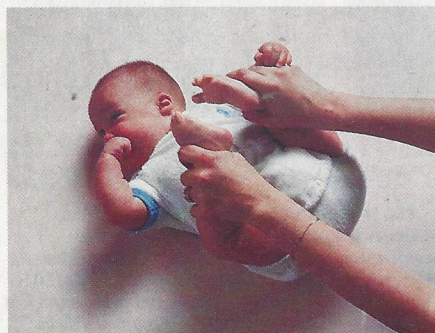

As your baby progresses, try adding simple toys or equipment to your exercise routines. "We use pillows, inflatable beach balls and other toys for the youngsters to touch, push, pull and manipulate," Rabb says. "We also put them on swings, slides, and bouncers so the babies learn to get oriented in space."

Remember—this is playtime! Don't push your child to perform. Instead, look at your workouts as a special way for you and baby to enjoy each other! ♡

Leg Stretch

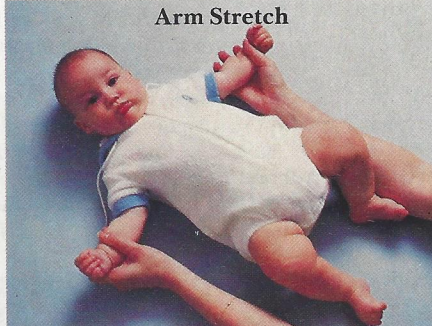

1. Holding baby's ankles in both hands, gently pull the legs apart into a "V." Hold for a count of two.

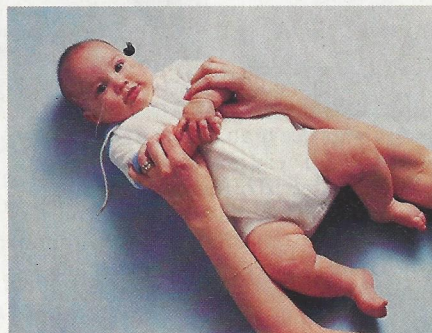

2. Bring the legs back and gently bend the knees into the chest. This exercise stretches baby's inner thigh muscles.

Arm Stretch

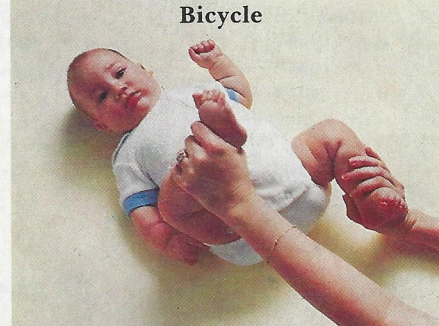

1. Stretch out both of baby's arms until they lie flat on the floor.

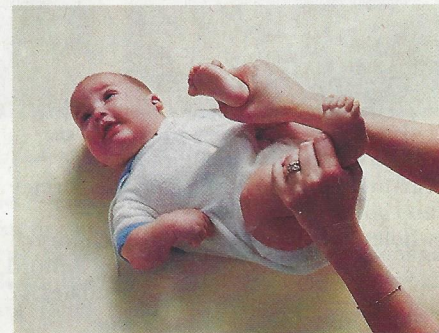

2. Bring the arms together and slowly cross them over the chest. This will stretch arm and chest muscles.

Bicycle

1. Begin with baby's knees bent into the chest. Then start rotating the legs to make baby "bicycle."

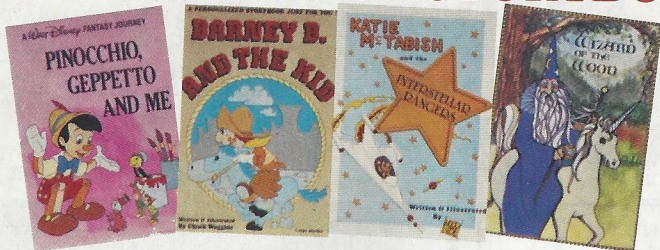

2. Complete three or four rotations. This exercise will help increase the hip's range of motion.

Exploring the Archives

Did Walt Disney really have an apartment at Disneyland?

—H.W., Las Vegas, NV

Yes, his small apartment was located upstairs in the firehouse. At the time of his death, Walt and his brother Roy were planning a new family apartment over New Orleans Square, but it was never built. However, if you look closely, you can see the initials of the two brothers in the wrought iron of a balcony there.

What set locales are located on the backlot of the Disney Studio in Burbank?—J.S., Agoura, CA

There are four primary areas of outdoor sets at the Disney Studio—the Zorro street, originally built for "Zorro" but later used for many European settings; the Western street, constructed for "Elfego Baca" (see page 18), "Texas John Slaughter," and other Disney Western mini-series of the late 1950s; the residential street, first used for "The Absent-Minded Professor"; and the business street, completely rebuilt recently for "Something Wicked This Way Comes." None of the buildings are permanent, and they can be moved, or removed, when necessary.

DISNEY CHANNEL TRIVIA

... The famous Borgia ring from "The Shaggy Dog" (see page 12) is now preserved in the Archives.

... Tom Tryon, now a best-selling author, starred as Texas John Slaughter before his stint in "Moon Pilot" (see page 12).

... When Jane Wyman and Agnes Moorehead joined the cast of "Pollyanna," (see page 11), they fondly recalled the previous time they had appeared in a motion picture together. The film was "Johnny Belinda," and both were nominated for Academy Awards. (Wyman won the Oscar.)

Readers who have Disney-related questions can write to Dave Smith, c/o The Disney Channel Magazine, 4111 W. Alameda Ave., Burbank, CA 91505.

Hi there!

This month I feel just like POLLYANNA—there's so much to be glad about on The Disney Channel. For instance, I can go along on THE INCREDIBLE JOURNEY, laugh at THE SHAGGY DOG, and wise up in LUDWIG'S THINK TANK. And that's not all.

I'm also glad that you can sit down with Mom, Dad or any trusted adult and learn how to be TOO SMART FOR STRANGERS from Winnie the Pooh and his pals. Growing up is even more fun when you feel safe, and this special program will help you learn how to take care of yourself. We created it because WE care about YOU!

Your pal,

Take a Crash Course in Humor with PROFESSOR VON DRAKE

You'll get an A+ for your sense of humor when you try Professor Ludwig Von Drake's favorite school day jokes and riddles on your friends.

Quacky History:

- Q. Who had the largest family in the world?
A. George Washington, the father of his country.
- Q. Who is history's most famous bandit?
A. Atlas! He held up the world!
- Q. Why didn't anyone play cards on Noah's Ark?
A. Because Noah sat on the deck.

Looney Literature:

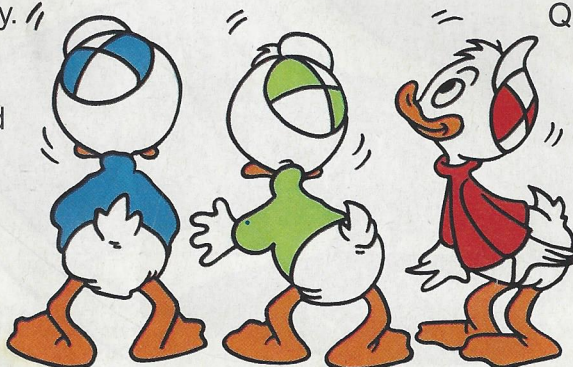

- Q. How do you know that the cow jumped over the moon?
A. Because of the Milky Way. //
- Q. What room did Alice in Wonderland find that had no walls, no door, and no floor?
A. A mushroom.

Funny Geography:

- Q. Why is a watch like a river?
A. Because it doesn't run long without winding.
- Q. Why does the Statue of Liberty stand in the New York Harbor?
A. Because it can't sit down.

Crazy Math:

- Q. If it takes three minutes to boil one egg, how many minutes does it take to boil three eggs?
A. Three minutes—if you boil them in the same pot.
- Q. What did the little arithmetic book say to the big arithmetic book?
A. You have more problems than I do.

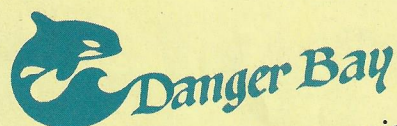

Let the Prof teach you a thing or two about laughter on LUDWIG'S THINK TANK September 1, 3, 7, 10, 13, 14, 20, 26 and 29.
